

Research Methodology and Academic Writing in Agricultural Sciences

"The course "Research Methodology and Academic Writing in Agricultural Sciences" is divided into 2 main thematic sections. The first section, as indicated by the title of the course, concerns the teaching of "Research Methodologies", where the subject of the course will concern the design of the research and the basic stages of preparation of the scientific works regarding a) the types of research, which are to be used, b) the ethics of research and the means of gathering the necessary data and conducting quality assurance checks, c) the writing and evaluation of a research and the overview of the research process, and d) the rules that should govern a correct presentation in a demanding and competitive environment, like a funding body after applying for a scientific grant or a similar case of stake holder.

The second section concerns the thematic "Academic Writing in Agricultural Sciences", where the understanding of how to write a scientific presentation of a scientific topic before an audience or its evaluation by certified scientists is elaborated. The development of the ability to collect data, synthesize information, write a paper and successfully present it at conferences, seminars, etc.. The rules and techniques that students should follow in order to succeed in the written part of writing are analyzed scientific paper they will choose as well as for the oral part of the Scientific presentation they are asked to give."